Last week, two strangers came into this place, and by their actions and conversations, attracted so much attention that an inquiry was institu-ted by several of our citizens into their business. They seemed to be prowling about the houses and working places of the colored folks of our village. On one occasion, the questions of one of them to a colored man in the employ of Dr. Seymour were such as to satisfy him that the stranger was a slave catcher, and by the Doctor's revelations the community tool the matter in hand. Quite a feeling was aroused. Mr. Charles C. Jennings, S. Marshall, and some others, waited upon the stranger; and made inquiries as to their business, which they evaded much as possible, but still said sufficient to satisfy our citizens that they were in quest of colored men. Mr. Jennings then, in particular, gave the strangers to understand what first law of nature.

And now that the matter is over for the present at least, and the heat of the feeling has subsided, we may as well declare our convictions that a slave can't breath our air, nor can one who breathes it be reduced a slavery God Alvarenty has decreed it, and the people will execute the judgment.—Paintsville Telegraph

In the afternoon the U. S. Deputy sucaked back with the carriage he had hired about 11 o'clock the evening before ostensibly to go into the country, the pure air of which had been ininted by the breath of efficial mensional bears. Mr. Wagoner and family as soon as convenient escaped from the talons of the Eagle and sought the protection of the class of the Lake, by the way of Detroit, on h's return home. It is unnecessary to say that his trees were all disposed of before he reached the Canada shore, but it is believed they move pited one on top of the other, till they reached nearly to the top of the building; the last car of the train standing on the track was forced up in front of them, and bodies of carlle were driven through into the second story of the shop. Nothing but the large size of this chimney prevented the locomotive from demolishing the entire shop. The mass piled up against the end of the machine shop reaches to the second story, and is composed of the remains of the locomotive, pieces of cars which are torn into shreds, mixes with bodies of cattle, sheep and loogs. Several hogs crawled out from under this pile, seemingly quite undisturbed.—
